We hear many complaints from the volunteers about the settlement with the State authorities.

We understand that the extravagant prices paid to contractors for worthless uniforms is deducted from the pay of the men, leaving them but a mere pittance in money. It is well known that the prices paid for overcoats and other clothing was such as to afford the contractors large profits-even as much as four and six dollars on each. Now we ask, is it right that these men, who have been for three months scouring the hills and ravines of Western Virginia, shooting and being shot at, shall pay these profits out of their small allowance? If favorits shall be allowed to pocket these large profits, let it come from those who gave it to them, and not the soldiers; their pay is small enough at best. The volunteer soldiers should be furnished their clothing at its cost. We protest against these large profits being deducted from their pay. Republicanism and the Union.

In the interval between the inauguration of President Lincoln on the 4th of March last and the issuing of his proclamation for volunteers on the 15th of April, there was in the Republican ranks a feeling of doubt and uncertainty as where he had thrown up extensive entrench

From the delay in taking any decided stand, a suspicion arose in the minds of many who had contributed to their elevation to power, that the and Confederate troops, and five thousand Vir-President and his Cabinet might possibly favor an amicable division of the Union.

Taking their cue from this, Republican journals and orators began to hint and some to speak plainly of the disadvantages of the Union rett's (the Eleventh Pennsylvania), and Owen's to the North, and to urge that it was an arrangement that had answered its purpose and should and three more to morrow. The radical abolition wing of the Republican party took up the secession line of argument, and advocated the doctrine with a zeal and earnestness that put to shame its most energetic supporters in the South. While the bombardment of Fort Sumter was progressing, WENDELL PRILLIPS, who may be regarded as a representative man of this class, made a speech in Boston, deprecating, in the most emphatic manner, any appeal to arms, insisting that the secessionists appeal to arms, insisting that the secessionists were right in principle, and urging that the only way to get rid of slavery was to let the people and selfish brutality must be the result of phiof those States that were so disposed go peaceably out of the Union ; whereas, an attempt to retain them in the Union, by a resort to force, Gen. Wool and the Administration.

On our first page we publish a letter from General Wood, exposing the treatment of himself by the Administration. It will, no doubt, be read with interest. The people have wondered why it is that this gallant old soldier has been ignored and retired at Troy, New York. This letter explains all.

The people were informed that he was sent o Troy to recruit his health. We are, however, informed by the General that he has never enjoyed better health than this summer, so that lodge will avail them nothing.

The principal object in discontinuing Gen Wook in the service at New York seems to have been to give CUMMING, of the New York Virginia light horse, and 300 from various World, a special pet of Camenon's, a chance to make some money out of the contracts for furnishing transportation and subsistence for the troops.

The Comparative Forces in the Great Battle.

The Tribune sums up as follows: Gen. Johnston's whole force at Winchester was about 42,000 men of all arms-infantry avalry and artillery. In artillery he was particularly strong, hav ing 62 guns of various caliber in the fortifica-tions. There were 1100 cavalry—800 being Southern States. Gen. Johnston left Winchester with 25,000 troops at one P. M. on Thursday last, to go di-troops at one P. M. on Thursday last, to go direct to the support of Beauregard at Manassas Junction, and by his express order. He took the road through Millwood to Barry's Ford on the Shenandoah, and thence to Piedmont Station on the Manassas Gap Railroad, a distance of 28 miles. This would be a march of two days at least, incumbered as he was with heavy at least, incumbered as he was with heavy artillery. From Piedmont Station to Manages unction by rail is about 40 miles. Provision had been made for this movement by taking the freight and passenger cars from the Winchester branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to Strasburg, the terminus of the Manassas Gap Road; they were hauled there on their own wheels
